NY meets Lee Broom

IT'S hard not to like British designer Lee Broom, with his exquisitely cool furniture, homewares and lighting. He's now opened his debut store in New York on Greene Street, Soho. Named Broom off Broome, it is also just off Broome Street – how's that for attention to detail? The 2,000 sq ft Soho store presents Broom's full range including the Mini Crescent collection – exclusively available to the US market and released to celebrate the new store launch. leebroom.com

It's time to raise the bar!

LIVE out your Tom Cruise dream with this bamboo cocktail bar for the garden. Coming with two stools thrown in at £250, it is probably one of the cheapest home boozers available. John Lewis' summer collection also features inflatable pineapples and a watermelon candle to reflect the carnival feel of Rio 2016. And at these prices you can afford to make the drinks free at your own Club Tropicana. Bamboo Tiki Bar, £250, johnlewis.com

Talk about a hot shot...

NEW and exclusive to Harrods is this spicy Arbikie Chilli Vodka. Perhaps surprisingly, the potato vodka comes from the Arbikie Highland Estate in Scotland and the Chipotle Chillis that give it its distinctive bite are from Scotland's first chilli farm. £44.95, in store, Harrods

Style handed on a plate

WE love a bit of colour here at Hot List and these trays from interior designer Lisa Todd don't disappoint. The Ndebele collection is inspired by her South African childhood. Each design is painted by hand before being printed using state-of-the-art technology. £45, lisatodd designs.com

This brew's the pops

FANCY something different to drink this summer? Kanuka's Popcorn tea should hit the spot. Heavenly enjoyed hot, but it's also good chilled on ice. The brand new start-up tea company says it contains subtle hints of pineapple and raspberry. £3.98, kanukatea.com

The HOT List

From flamingo clocks to chilli vodka – here's what's hot this week

Flamingoing, going, gone...

THESE flamingo wall clocks are ludicrously good value from the budget Danish home brand. They launched yesterday, so get one hot off the press while you can. £5, tigerstores.co.uk

Give your garden screen time

ZONING is not just for inside the house. These clever garden screens have been designed by Gavin Hall, an RHS-trained landscape gardener. The screens help divide areas up or decorate the more neglected parts of your garden. This 'Bluebell Wood' is one of the latest designs. Two sizes: 6ft high by 6ft 4in wide [£65] and 6ft high by 12ft 8in wide [£120], gardenscreenscompany.co.uk

Flipping great tables

HOW'S this for a clever idea? These tables feature a white top on one side and a black finish on the other, so by flipping the top, you can change the look. From £250, nordichouse.co.uk

Make some shapes

SUMMER is sorted with this brand new, on trend lounge chair from Habitat. Maui, which cashes in on the hot tropical theme of SS16, has a sling pattern – and is the work of Martha Coates, in-house pattern designer at Habitat. £60, habitat.co.uk
